Today's children are more attached to electronics than ever before. From Snapchat to Fortnite, there are real dangers lurking behind the most popular apps and games. Parents must be vigilant and not only limit exposure, but also educate themselves on the potential for harm.

This FREE seminar will help parents to understand what prowls behind the phone and game console.

About the Speaker

Lieutenant Brooke Walker is the Commander of the Alabama State Bureau of Investigation's Special Victims Unit (SVU). The SVU is the parent division of the Child Exploitation Unit and the Digital Forensic Unit. Brooke has nineteen years of law enforcement experience, with thirteen years focusing on the investigations of Internet Crimes Against Children and Child Sexual Exploitation. Brooke is also the Commander of the Alabama Internet Crimes Against Children Task Force, which hosts over sixty law enforcement agencies and over one hundred affiliate members. In addition, she conducts training and public outreach for law enforcement officers, educators, administrators, students and parents to enhance their awareness and preventative measures for online safety. Brooke holds a Masters in Criminal Justice Administration from Troy University
